Last Saturday evening, the opening entertainment of the season's course, under the management of our Ladies' Village Improvement society, was a success, indeed. George E. Garretson, under the auspices of the White Mountain League, of Boston, styled "the merry monarch of music"—had a program of music, juggling and magic, that kept his audience alert and pleased to the end, as was shown by an abundance of hearty applause. In talking with our citizens since the entertainment, we have not heard a dissenting voice as to the pleasure given by it. And here we may add that Mr. Garretson, while here, paid a high compliment to George C. Rheinfrank, who is to lecture in our course on December 13. Let our citizens show their warm appreciation of the work of their Village Improvement society by a generous patronage.

Deaths of Frank Blanchard and Roland B. Bruce.

A short time ago we announced the death of Frank Blanchard at the Old Fellows' home in Laddow, where he and his companion went to live seven years ago. About twenty years ago they came to this town from Peacham. He was left a motherless infant, and an orphan when sixteen years of age. He married Adeline Eddy of Peacham, who is his only family survivor. He was a man of good habits and possessed an endearing and affectionate nature. While living in Peacham, Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard adopted a motherless boy and cared for him until grown to manhood. He will be remembered by many as the kind and accommodating stage driver. After living here a few years, they adopted a little girl from the orphan's home, caring for her until she married and went to Randolph to live. Mr. Blanchard was a great sufferer from asthma for the last thirty years of his life. He was a worthy member of the Methodist church. Two weeks previous to his death, he was taken with a gripe, becoming delirious and remaining in that condition until he died at the age of 76 years. His funeral was held from the I. O. O. F. home, with interment there.

Roland B. Bruce died at his home October 29, after a few days' illness of heart failure and general breaking down. He was born in Woodbury December 24, 1831, and was one of a family of six children of Ebenezer and Almira Blackmer Bruce. Only one survives him, a brother in Woodbury. He received his early education in that town, going later to an academy in Montpelier. A number of years of his early manhood were spent in the middle West, teaching and surveying. In 1859 he returned to his native town and February 23, 1861, was married to Sarah R. Ball, daughter of Luther and Laura P. Lakeman Ball, and lived five years on a farm near the old home in Woodbury. Two children were born to them, Jessie Almira, wife of Alvin Clark, who died April 30, 1886, aged 34 years, and Budd Luther, who resides on the home farm, which his father bought when he moved from Woodbury in 1867. In 1888 he was sent as town representative from Woodbury. He also served as lister and had held offices of trust in this town. He was a very conscientious man, always ready to lend a helping hand to those in need, a kind husband and father. His only desire to live was that he might lighten others' cares, but he was willing and ready to go if he could not be well and strong again. He attended the Methodist church until declining health deprived him of that privilege. He leaves a wife and son, who have the sympathy of friends. Funeral services were held at his home, Rev. Mrs. Ewan of South Woodbury officiating, in the absence of Rev. F. E. Currier. His remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at South Woodbury.

Friction Bearings or Ball Bearings—Which?

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter with Gardner Ball Bearing Joint

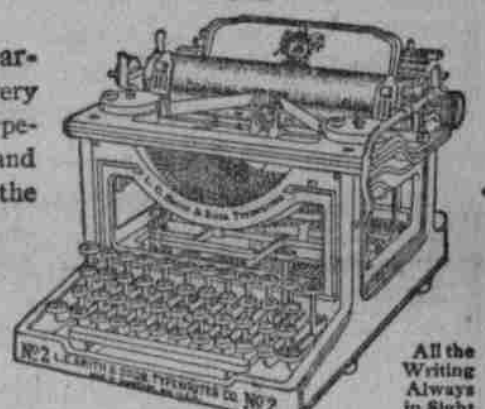

The ordinary friction bearing will wear loose. Each revolution or vibration grinds out a small portion of the bearing surface. After a while it wobbles—adjustment permanently ruined.

The New Model

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

is fitted with Ball Bearings throughout. Every vital wearing part—type-bar joints, carriage, and type-bar segment—has the kind of bearings that thousands of operations cause to run even smoother than at first.
